

This is your opportunity to own a limited-edition Park Synagogue mezuzah.

We commissioned local artists, Matthew Hollern and Pamela Argentero, to create a pewter mezuzah based on the three symbols Eric Mendelsohn used throughout our beloved Park Synagogue Main.

The Crown: “There are three crowns that a person can strive to attain: the crown of learning, the crown of the priesthood, and the crown of royalty; but a crown of good name exceeds them all.” – Pirke Avot. In Judaism, the most important quality is having a good name or reputation. To attain this, Jews perform mitzvot or good deeds to help all people.

The Tablets: Mendelsohn used a stylized version of the Hebrew letter “shin” instead of writing out the commandments or numbering them in Hebrew. He decided on shin since it is the first letter in three significant Hebrew words: Shalom, Shema, and Shaddai, an ancient Hebrew word for God.

The Hands: This is the sign of the priestly blessing. In Biblical days, Rabbis were called priests. They blessed people with their hands in this position.
